There is lots of instruction on how to stay out of the hospital.
Ours is designed to get you in.

It's normal to feel apprehensive about hospital visits.
How long should you stay? Where should you sit?
What should you say?

We can help...

Whether you are a deacon in the church, a nurse, or are simply trying to be a supportive friend, Princeton Theological Seminary's Certificate in Caregiving program is designed for you. Each of our Certificate courses, such as Making Hospital Visits, will equip you to handle the practical, emotional and spiritual challenges of caregiving. Goodgrief.

Almost without exception, people requiring long-term care, regardless of the situation, experience grief and loss. If you are the caregiver, will you know what to say?

How to provide comfort?

We can help...

Feelings associated with grieving can result from illness, aging, retirement or death of a loved one. Understanding the stages of grief and loss is essential for all caregivers. Princeton Theological Seminary's courses can help you process the inevitable grief and loss in your own life – And enable you to console and support those in your care. If only the caregiver's task was as clearly labeled.

By the year 2050, the number of people with Alzheimer's or other forms of dementia could reach 16 million.

If someone you love is diagnosed, will you be prepared?

We can help...

The numbers are staggering – and it's difficult to predict who will be affected. A member of your family, a friend or neighbor. The smartest approach is to plan ahead. Princeton Theological Seminary's certificate courses can prepare you to be a soothing presence in an anxious environment.
